

SANTA ANA, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1937

Wait A Minute

In Flander's field—the poppies grow—in Santa Ana they blossom from every lapel—or should, because its Poppy Day—Florence (Mrs. Eugene) Robinson, Tona (Mrs. Robert) Sandon and scores of Legion auxiliary members have been exchanging the crimson petal flowers for dimes all day long—ditto Annie (Mrs. James) Sullivan and V.E.W. auxiliary members.

Prettiest red carnations we have seen form a border for the lawn of a ranch home on the northeast corner of North Main street and La Veta avenue—loveliest red roses are the Paul Scarlets in the A. J. Cruickshank gardens in Tustin—in full bloom at present is the bougainvillea vine which rambles gracefully over the lofty branches of a palm tree in the 300 block on South Broadway.

Agnes and George (investment securities) Bond say the flowers up in Oregon are just gawing and they ought to know 'cause they just arrived home from Eugene yesterday—Salena (Mrs. James) Tucker did some right fancy driving the other night when she and five friends began their trip to the station just 11 minutes before the Iron Horse was due to leave with Esse and Richard (S. A. Lumber Co.) Emlison on board—and believe it or not the Tucker crowd was there to wave goodbye—(we could say something about the driver's being all tuckered out).

Kenneth (service station) Hunt and Frank (butcher-boy) Snyder started to Idaho the other day to see Frankie's poppa—but they ended up in Shaver Summit—we had never heard of it, either—Jessie (Mrs. Irvon) MacFarlane visiting niece Dorothea and Fred (Aircraft corp.) Winslow in their honeymoon home, 1377 Warren street, Long Beach—Louise (Mrs. Ray) Klumb and son Fred (3 years and 9 months to his credit) in Ye Home Towne to celebrate birthday of Louise's brother, Allen Winslow—Mama (Mrs. Nell D.) Winslow serving on the jury so visiting daughter prepares meal—Arthur (attorney) Koepsel finds time to do a little cooking now and then—and when it comes to barbecuing steaks, he is quite the chef, they say.

Wait (salesman) Bacon not only brings home the bacon, but cooks it himself these days—cute little wife Becky is in Riverside doing two weeks of school teaching—Becky was on the committee for Jr. Ebell dance, and was quite perturbed when some of the pretty balloon grape clusters decorating the ballroom were broken—deflating 300 balloons is not the light and airy task it would seem—Seen at the champion badminton matches the other night were Margaret and Ed (rancher) Hall and Linn and Bert (lawyer) West coming in a little late and sitting in the front row—Zena (teacher) Leck and blonde girl friend diving over a seat or two—Gene (old banker) Erbenbraut greeting old friends—Eva and Ernest (furniture store) Piper watching son Preston doing his bestest out in the game—Twila (champ herself) Heath amused at missing a pretty shot—Sam (Laguna) Pity intent on the game—Ray (Gaucho) Foster taking notes.

Doris and Bill (carpenter) Shields are momma and poppa to Bill Jr., who made his appearance just about a week ago—Martha and Joe (First National bank) Harless drew a daughter, and do they think she is mightie-fine?—Delcie and Ed (plumber) Bradley are buying shoes for a baby boy born just this week—Mabel and Oscar Kito have a six pound addition to their family—Larry Leon Kito arrived May 22—Granpapa Charles and Grandmama Bertha Dixon are quite as excited as the boy's young parents.

Newton (Laguna) Jacobsen is looking through rose-colored glasses now that he has a scholarship from Berkeley—former Santa Ana Marie Jacobsen has a brand new position with Texas Health department—John (Phi Beta Kappa) Henderson gets his Bachelor of Arts degree from Occidental in June—F-nest (art student) Hart now is the proud possessor of every boy's wish (a pup, just plain old dog) which made its appearance in the art room of a sudden—Marvin ("Rocky"—U.S.C.) Spicer's going to be sports editor of the Trojan newspaper next year—not so long ago that his stories were appearing in El Don and in Ye Register—Kay (Mrs. Braden) Finch is doing herself right proud a la pottery medium—she makes the cleverest animal figures—

Alice (blond secretary) Martin's cute white hat gives her that little-girl-surprised-look—Holmes (with such curly hair) Chambless entrusting a letter to the care of Uncle Sam—Eda (Mrs. Robert) Miller golfing at Ye Country club—Sara (bridge champ) Haddon admitting that she always eats sandwiches and such when she goes to a circus or rodeo—and therefore expects everybody who attends the Society's or show June 5 to eat at least one hotdog.....

The Mixing Bowl

By ANN MEREDITH

Don't let tan and sunburn get the jump on you this summer. One treatment a week will keep your arms, hands, face and neck even shaded.

In the day when you have time and can depend on not having to answer the door or phone, get busy with your weekly bleaching treatment. Mix together:

1/3 cup lemon juice,
1/3 cup weak peroxide of hydrogen

Add flour to make a thick spreading paste.

Wash with mild soap and warm water to be sure all dust and make up have been removed. Pat the bleaching paste on face, neck, arms (right up to shoulders) and the hands clear to finger tips. Lie down, relax, sleep if you can until the bleaching mask has dried to a hard crust (about 1 hour). To remove, pat off in tepid water or get under the shower. Follow removal with a dash of cold water, and finish by rubbing in a little feeding cream.

Don't forget that a good recipe and a stamped, self-addressed envelope entitle you to a copy of the interesting Calory List, one of the best and biggest offered by any newspaper today.

CHURCHES JOIN IN FELLOWSHIP MOVE

Various churches of this district of Southern California will join in a fellowship meeting at Townsend hall, 509 West Fourth street, Sunday at 2:30 p. m. when Dr. J. S. Norvell, patriarch of the ministry, will bring the message.

The Rev. Walter A. England, Jr., pastor, today invited the general public to attend the service, churches and faiths, it was said. Although conducted in Townsend hall, it is a religious service, and not connected with the Townsend movement, it was explained.

"However, Townsend club members will find a hearty welcome," said the minister.

Dr. Norvell, now 82 years of age, is well known in Santa Ana. His life-long ministry included many years as a missionary to China. "He has a vast knowledge of God's word and should be heard by those who are sick and believe in God and have not had relief," said a church announcement.

Besides Dave, who entered the eighth grade, Gloria was promoted to the seventh; Gilbert to the fifth; Ramona to the fourth and Stephen to the second. Grace, aged four, attended, too, because there was no one home to care for her.

Memorial Day

War is the public incinerator of the world; it destroys the finer sensibilities of men. It lays waste the flower of manhood. However, the lives which were sacrificed in its name, are forever laid on the altar of Honor. They are glorified, lifted to the plane of idealism.

The names of our heroes will never die, they are etched on the pages of history. Each year a holiday is declared that you and I may pay tribute to their valor, to the deeds of heroism which each man displayed; that we may perpetuate in the garden of our memory the glories of their achievements.

CHURCH TO GIVE UNUSUAL PROGRAM

A service of unusual interest will be conducted at the Four Square church, corner of Fairview and Sycamore streets, Sunday night at 7:30, when Phillip S. Kerr, of Houston, Texas, will be present to conduct the service, also to sing and play.

Evangelist Phillip S. Kerr is an able speaker, and a musician of note, having composed several hundred religious songs which are sung in many churches today. While sitting at the piano Sunday night he will compose a song, after asking for several titles from the audience. The song will then be given to the one whose title will be chosen.

Another feature of the service will be the stringed ensemble, played by a number of young girls, and Evangelist Kerr will bring a message of interest to both young and old, it is announced.

STUDENTS TO HEAR SPECIAL SERVICES

There will be a recognition service for all university, college and high school graduates at the Spurgeon Methodist church Sunday evening at 7:30. Those graduating from the various schools will sit in a body in the main auditorium of the church. There will be a special program of music by the young peoples choir.

The pastor, the Rev. C. M. Aker, will preach a special sermon on "The Secret of Youthful Strength." At the close of the service there will be an informal reception for those graduating this year, in the church parlors. All parents and teachers are cordially invited to this service.

Unitarians To Hear Memorial Day Addresses

"Channing and the Memorial of Virtue" will be the Memorial Day subject at the Unitarian church tomorrow, in the Theodore Parker Centenary series on nineteenth century Liberals. "It often happens that the greatest of souls creates the greatest havoc in the world," said the minister, the Rev. Julia N. Budlong. "Witness Lincoln, whose compassionate nature hauled little pigs out of the mud, but who carried his country into tragic civil war. Such was Channing, whose Baltimore address defined the issues which split the orthodoxy of the early nineteenth century and created the church which calls him its first canonized Saint."

His life and work and the meaning of his version of "Liberalism" will be the theme of the sermon at the Unitarian church tomorrow.

A change in the program of activities of the church will be inaugurated with the summer. The mid-week news review on Wednesday will be discontinued and an open forum, sponsored by an Orange county citizens' committee will meet on Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock in the church auditorium. The first meeting, on Tuesday, June 1, will be addressed by the head of the law department of Los Angeles Junior College, Dr. Edward P. Morton. His topic will be: "The Age of the Supreme Court Judges: Should they be under Seventy?" Dr. B. F. Badgley of Anaheim, will preside.

Gospel Assembly Will Broadcast

The public is cordially invited to attend the big radio rally next Monday evening, May 31, at 7:30, at the Full Gospel Assembly, 1400 West Third street, under the direction of the pastor, E. E. Fullerton, of Wilmington, and his radio group.

A great number of churches are expected to be represented at the rally. The Rev. Mr. Fudderton speaks daily at 9:15 a. m. over KGER, Long Beach.

A DAY OF REMEMBRANCE

"And this day shall be unto you for a memorial." Exodus 12:14.

Once each year Memorial Day causes us to turn our thoughts again to those who have given their lives for our country. For a few moments these departed heroes live again in memory as we speak our words of praise and lay our tribute of flowers on their last resting places. This day, which was intended to be used as a holy day, has come to be more of a holiday, wherein picnics take the place of pious and patriotic musings, but even so we cannot escape some sense of its fundamental meaning.

We need to be reminded that it has cost much to build this great nation. It has cost heavily in men's lives and in men's toil to give us a land of freedom and opportunity and privilege, where we may with some degree of safety carry on our pursuit of happiness. Certainly the least we can do to show appreciation is to carry on the struggle in our own day to defend, protect and build, that American ideals and institutions may be perpetuated.

But Memorial Day may well remind us that it takes more than wars and soldiers to build our nation. Today we pay especial honors to those who served on the field of battle, but without taking from them any of the glory of their achievements we may remember that peace hath her heroes, as well as her victories, no less renowned than those of war.

Let us give a thought to that great peacetime army of pioneers who crossed the plains, pushed through the forests and climbed over the mountains that a new world might be opened to those hardy Americans who could brave the hardships of life in an untamed land. Even as we are indebted to those who faced the fires of battle so are we under obligations to those who faced the dangers of desert and plain and mountain passes. Those bones which bleached along the Overland Trail in early days were the bones of heroic dead as truly as though they had fallen at Gettysburg or at Vimy Ridge.

There is another great company of loyal Americans who have served well, although they carried no arms and wore no uniform. These are the statesmen and leaders who framed our government, drafted our bills of rights, set up our Constitution and then guided the young nation through its years of growth. To these men, great and wise, we owe a debt that can never be paid. Surely no one can object if we include them in our Memorial Day thought.

Still another company deserving honorable mention is one made up of that multitude of plain, common citizens who have done their work honorably and honestly, who have built homes and reared families, paid their taxes, voted, and in general have conducted themselves as good citizens should do. To Mr. John W. Citizen, honest, industrious, loyal, this great nation is eternally indebted.

In a word, Memorial Day, while dedicated to our soldier dead, may very well remind us that it took all kinds of people and of service to create and maintain a great nation. We shall not miss the meaning of the day if we permit our thought to include all these in our remembrance. We shall better interpret the day if we permit their examples to inspire us to better citizenship in our turn.

There is one other thought which should come to us on such a day. Memorial Day should emphasize with new force the folly and futility of war. What a waste of men and money has been involved even in the few conflicts in which the United States has engaged! And how little there has been in the causes of these conflicts which could not have been settled through peaceful negotiation had men only been willing to exercise a bit of patience and forbearance! Our wars have taken the lives of countless men who could have been vastly more useful alive than dead. To die for one's country may be beautiful and glorious, but to live for it has more practical value.

As we pay tribute on this Memorial Day to our fallen heroes, let us remember, first of all, our debt to God who gave us this fair land and who guided our fathers in making it a place in which free men can live, and let us resolve that no act of ours shall ever impair the noble structure of ideals which they have set up for us. Then let us remember what our nation has cost to bring it to its present greatness, and let that memory spur us to greater endeavor to build our own lives into the structure so that generations to come may remember us with gratitude akin to that which we feel for our fathers by whose sacrifices we live the more abundant life today.

This Movement Is Made Possible by These Outstanding Public Spirited Citizens Who Are Striving to Make Our Community a Better Place in Which to Live.

WHILE efforts are being made to discourage "stunt" flights, Representative Ashbrook of Ohio has introduced a resolution in Congress providing for the carrying of stamped mail by other than the regular carriers, thus permitting private persons to carry mail on special flights or exhibitions.

Another resolution is one introduced by Senator Copeland of New York, providing for lower airmail rates and permitting the use of postal cards in airmail at 2 cents each. Another airmail classification would be "lettergrams," or regular size letters folded in and sealed without use of an envelope. These would be flown at 3 cents each. The regular airmail rate, also, would be reduced to 5 cents a half ounce.

To Hold Anaheim De Molay Dance

ANAHEIM, May 29.—Tonight's dance at the Concordia club will be the second weekly dance to be given under the De Molay's sponsorship and the popularity of the last one, which brought out 260 people, is expected to be repeated.

The De Molay inaugurated the plan of the Saturday night dances at the Concordia club on West Broadway to give young people of the community an opportunity to meet for a social evening at an approved and chaperoned event. Something special in the way of music is planned, according to De Molay members.

STATE AID LOOMS FOR TOURNAMENT OF LIGHTS

SENATE VOICES PRAISE OF GALA BEACH AFFAIR

State aid for the Newport-Balboa Tournament of Lights, one of Southern California's outstanding summer festivals, loomed as a probability for next year following action of the state senate yesterday.

The senate adopted a resolution of approval and commendation of the Tournament held each year at Newport Harbor.

Senator Harry Westover, already has announced that at the next session of the legislature, he will present a measure asking the state to vote a sum of money matching any amount local people may put up.

Financial Aid Seen
Westover said that he will do this because of the enthusiasm of local citizens sponsoring the event and because of the educational and cultural value of the undertaking.

Joseph A. Beek, secretary of the senate and president of the Balboa Tournament of Lights association, had filed an application with the state for an appropriation of $25,000 to be used in financing this year's festa. This application, Beek was informed, will not be favorably acted upon because of the numerous demands made this year on the state treasury.

According to sponsors of the event, however, certain state aid will be extended for this year's festival. The nature of this aid has not yet been revealed.

IT SEEMS TO ME

By Heywood Brown

I was beginning to fear that Ireland wasn't to be Ireland any more, but after extended debate in the Dail it has been decided that the name Eire will be used only in the Gaelic text. This ought to be a comfort to all who love after-supper singing, because it would have been pretty tough to throw "The River Shannon" and "Irish Eyes" back into Erse at this late date.

As a matter of fact, I am hoping that the Gaelic revival will be for the most part a literary enterprise rather than a complete change in the language of the people. Meaning no offense to the MacNamaras, the Reynoldses, the Joe Williamsses, the Fureys and other good friends, it's tough enough to understand many of the Irish when they employ English, without having to face the possibility that they may turn on the Gaelic.

Silenced By Shawian Threat
It is said that when Bernard Shaw went back to his native land some years ago, after a long absence, he was hailed as a national hero. As usual, Mr. Shaw proceeded to kick his enthusiasm right in the pants. He accepted an invitation to be the chief speaker at a meeting called for the purpose of promoting the use of the ancient language, but he began his address by a severe criticism of Irish dentistry. Mr. Shaw said that he felt that the Irish should pay more attention to their teeth and less to an almost forgotten tongue. The audience booed and hissed and roared disapproval, but when quiet of a sort had been obtained Shaw advanced to the footlights and said, "If you don't cease that racket I will make all the rest of my speech in Gaelic, and not a soul in this house will understand a word."

The retention of the name "Ireland" was obtained chiefly through the efforts of John Costello, former attorney general, who argued that the word "Eire" would confuse foreigners and make them think that there were now two countries instead of one. Among the foreigners I rather imagine that the Irish-Americans would oppose change, for Ireland remains a name to conjure with in spite of distresses which have been forced from time to time upon that land. And if it be said that English is the speech of the oppressor, the Irish can at least draw some consolation from the fact that their own scholars have taken this tongue and used it more eloquently and musically than its original possessors. It would be a pity if the English of Dublin university were to perish from the face of the earth.

Roosevelt Knows His English
Indeed, the British, and more particularly the dwellers in the dominions, need some leadership if the purity and poetry of English speech is to be preserved. In listening to the broadcasting of the coronation I was struck by the ugly voices and enunciation of most of the native broadcasters.

I wanted to hear something more nearly like the accent of Shaw or of John McCormack, for that matter, since the tenor speaks almost as beautifully as he sings. However, I have no wish to bend over backward in praise of Erin. Here and there in America certain individuals cherish and preserve the best traditions of English speech.

I think that at some time in his career Franklin D. Roosevelt ought to travel to London as a missionary and teach British statesmen how to use their native tongue. I am not quite willing to accept the easy theory that the President's felicitous vocal equipment can be ascribed wholly to his Groton-Harvard upbringing. In very many cases I find that dialect almost a burlesque of the Oxonian, which I regard as quite a bit too something or other.

And so I think that both Ireland and America should cease to worry about the fact that English is not our mother tongue. Mother England doesn't talk as well as she used to. I fear the old lady has much in her mouth.

Frances Willard

Miss Libby's ninth grade art class is beginning on its final problem of free design. The class is turning out some excellent designs for cretonne and will paper, it is reported.

Each eighth and seventh grade student has made at least three out door sketches, a drawing of Willard, the tennis courts, automobiles, and houses, during the past month.

Doris Wells gave a very interesting talk to the W and T social studies classes Tuesday. The speaker, who has been on the mission field in India will resume her duties in the fall.

At an earlier meeting of the social studies group, Ralph Huffman gave a talk on China, the conditions there and the people.

Plans for summer vacation were discussed at the latest meeting of Girl Scout Troop 4 in Methodist Episcopal church.

All the Girls are working for their badges, so the troop will have a good showing at the Court of Awards, June 4, it was announced.

At their recent meeting, members of Girl Scout troop 3 decided that each girl must pay for her badge before it is ordered. Scouts voted to discontinue regular meetings during the summer and to resume activities in the fall.

Today the seventh grade was entertained by seventy students from four of Miss Esther Davis' classes. The group sang, "Vine Lamour," "Canoe Song," "Now the Day is Over," and "Fleecy Clouds." Patricia Collins played violin obligato for the latter number.

Twelve girls sang "Sweet and Low" and the "Memorial Song" as an encore. The group was accompanied by Anna Mae Burkes at the piano.

Willard girls will wear the same type of uniform next year as the girls have been wearing for the past few years, it was announced today by Mrs. Arnold Lund, dean of girls. Questionnaires were sent out to mothers of seventh and eighth grade girls, and the majority of parents proved to be in favor of uniforms, it was said.

DRIVE CAREFULLY - SAVE A LIFE -

"OUR CHILDREN'S CHANCES"

James Scott, assistant superintendent of adult education, speaking before the Adult Education Assembly at the Hollywood Bowl, said,

"What chance have our children when instructors proclaim Russia the best country and the United States the worst, when they define us as the aggressor in all wars and the bully among nations?"

We agree with Mr. Scott and we do not think that the children have much chance either, when the Board of Education compels them to read 3700 pages of Harold Rugg's books advocating national planning, saying that machines cause unemployment and that this is a land of plenty and prattle about democracy without defining the word.

It would not be so bad to vaccinate or expose our children to the fallacies of Rugg if they were given an opportunity to read an explanation of the fallacies of the voting majority controlling our individual lives. It is too much to expect, however, that many of them accidentally will find any of the masterpieces which our educators contend are obsolete and that things are different now. Yet our public educators teach the Rugg principles have no plan of balancing the budget, maintaining sound money and having good jobs for all people who want to work. All they contend is that things are different now and should be planned by the voting majority.

We again ask, with Mr. Scott, what chance have our children?

THOSE BEWILDERING POLITICIANS

Dismissal of William Penn from the county welfare department by the new county administration indicates that, after all efficiency does not count in political office. Because Penn was recognized as one of the most efficient officials at the courthouse.

This might be bewildering if it weren't so much the habit of politicians.

It is wearying business for the trusting citizen trying to follow the uncertain trail of the political reformer. It is a trail that has dizzy twists and turns, and the trusting direct taxpayer usually finds that it leads him right back where he started.

A curious civil phenomenon is this fellow, the trusting direct taxpayer. He is ever hopeful and optimistic, inclined to follow bands, and owning a reverent awe of the word "reform". It always shocks him to learn that his government needs reforming and thrills him to have a part in such reform.

His seemingly limitless capacity to swallow whatever is fed him during a campaign, experience the ensuing cramps of realization, and then forget all about them, makes him ideal meat for the political reformer. The t. d. t. is always ready in the next campaign to whoop joyfully into another reform campaign, and throw out the reformers of the last campaign.

Incidentally, that is one of the hazards of reforming. It always comes your own turn to be reformed.

One cannot help but wonder what would happen to a private business that would let a man go without notice when his services were satisfactory, as they have done in the Penn case.

The ethics of the business men might be bad but they are not quite as bad as those of the politicians.

"ENJOY LIFE?"

Jay Franklin, who writes in The Register under, "We, The People", in discussing Rockefeller, shows that he is not much of a thinker when he says that Rockefeller played golf, gave away dimes and had sense to retire and enjoy life in his declining years. Evidently, Mr. Franklin does not realize that accomplishment is the greatest pleasure. He thinks idleness and recreation are enjoyment.

Evidently his whole philosophy is based on the theory that accomplishment is not necessary for happiness. Many a person who has tried to retire finds there is something missing—and that is accomplishment.

WHO'S UNFAIR TO LABOR?

The charge of being unfair to labor is about as old as time. Now it develops that William Green, president of the A. F. of L., stands charged with "unfair labor practice" before the National Labor Relations Board, under the Wagner Act.

It seems a Newspaper Guild organizer, in Chicago, and on the payroll of the A. F. of L., made a speech favoring the C. I. O. and was promptly fired by Green. The organizer now complains he was discharged for "union activity", and demands reinstatement.

We wonder what the National Labor Relations Board will do in cases like this and what will become of free speech.

REDUCTION IN RATES

Announcement by the California Railroad commission that the Southern California Edison company would reduce its rates effective on June 1 was received with applause in Santa Ana.

The exact amount Orange county users of Edison electricity will receive will not be known until the new schedules are made public, but whatever it amounts to, it will be gratefully accepted.

There was a time when public utilities were the scorn of the nation, but recent years have found that they have been most liberal in the consideration of their clients.

A check of electricity rates in Santa Ana 15 years ago and today will prove a surprise to the doubting one.

Little Benny's Note Book

BY LEE PAPE

Me and Puds Simkins and Lucky Leroy Shooster was walking along just walking along, and Lucky Leroy said, G, look what I see, good luck.

Meaning 2 horse shoes laying rite on the payment in back of somebody's front steps, and Puds said, Well G, there's only 2 of them and there's 3 of us.

How about tossing up to see who gets them? I said, and Leroy Shooster said, Aw, you and Puds can have them, I'm so darn lucky, anyways I don't need them.

G, thanks, Lucky, I feel lucky already, so do I, thanks, me and Puds said.

And me and him each picked one up and we all kept on going, and half ways down the block somebody said, Hay, where you guys going with them horse shoes?

Being a big tuff looking kid in a green sweater carrying a bag full of something as if he was coming home from an errand, and me and Puds said, We found them, they was laying rite out on the payment, why, what's a matter?

You found them in back of my front steps and they belong to me, that's what's a matter, the tuff kid said.

And he took one hand off the bag and gave me and Puds each a quick push in the face and took the horse shoes and kept on going, me and Puds says, O yes, they was lucky all rite, lucky horse shoes, like fun.

Sure they was lucky, Leroy Shooster said. If they wasn't lucky this would never of fell out of his bag while he was pushing your faces, and I wouldn't give it back to anybody with a disposition like that, he said.

Meaning a swell looking red apple, and he started to eat it when we got to the next block, giving me and Puds each a bite and a half when we reminded him he never would of got it if it hadn't of been for us contributing our faces to be pushed.

Questions can be decided by the voting majority, contrary to all human experience, on the simple ground that things are different now, we get a little picture of the reasoning qualities of our politicians and educational leaders. They believe what they wish.

It certainly would be ideal to be able to add to our national wealth by giving each person more leisure and, at the same time, more of the comforts of life. Evidently, we still believe in miracles.

Real Salary
A man's real salary is that portion of his salary which he appropriates for his own use. If he reinvests a large part of his salary, it is not his real income and will not be his real income until he consumes the fruits of his investments, if there be any.

General Hugh S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Here's a guess that the new wages and hours bill is going to find it a rocky road to Dublin—if it ever gets there.

The sanest, strongest argument for it is that degraded labor conditions in any state spread out like a greasy stain across its boundaries to degrade labor conditions in other states.

They do that in two ways. First, the low-cost products of such sweated labor invade markets with higher labor standards and force competing employers either to reduce their own standards or go out of business.

Second, industries in areas of higher labor standards are tempted to (and do) migrate to areas of low wages thus reducing employment in the places from whence they came.

Stability and improvement in labor conditions demand a stop to this. As between sovereign nations that is done by tariffs. There can be no tariffs as between states of the Union. Therefore, this bill properly proposes to protect interstate commerce by prohibiting the interstate shipment of the products of sub-standard labor conditions.

But there is another and equally pressing side to this problem. There are long-established economic areas in this country where life has fallen into its own pattern—frequently a happy and satisfactory one—on wages, for example, much below other areas. As to these places, a sudden interruption of the "noiseless tenor of their way" would possibly destroy them.

To an extent, most of the South is in this category and so is much of agriculture. So also are hundreds of small towns and ecopomic areas scattered across the whole country. As compared with New York City, to take an extreme, living is cheap, wants are fewer and life is far more secure. Surely products of these in interstate commerce should not be permitted to invade the markets of established industrial areas on a higher labor standard to degrade theirs. But on the other hand, should it be made a crime for them not suddenly to change their whole pattern of existence except where such an effect on other areas can be clearly shown—as frequently it can't?

The Connery bill, while proposing differentials to take care of peculiar circumstances, makes no such distinction. Furthermore, instead of relying solely on a prevention of shipments which will thus quarantine against such effects, it also makes it a crime in any such area to pay less than its fixed compensation.

Now quite apart from the economics of this are the questions: first, can it be enacted; second, will the courts sustain it, third, can it be enforced?

I think the answers to all these questions are in grave doubt. Unless the South, most of agriculture, and many special localities are assured against effects suggested here, the bill is unlikely

OUR CHILDREN

BY ANGELO PATRI

BOYS' NEEDS

Boys have to play and work and live together to get the best out of their growing time, which is all too short. No grown person can ever take the place of companions of the boy's own age. They learn quickly and easily from each other, accept guidance, praise and punishment from each other and thrive mightily while they would wilt under the same treatment from a well-intentioned adult.

It is a great mistake to keep a boy closely confined to his own company and that of his family. He has to get beyond the family limits to sample life, test it, make it work. There is a great difference between working with a member of the family and working with an outsider. The family contribution is likely to be coals to Newcastle. The child knows every wrinkle of thought in the family group and gains little except bare experience by close association with it. Every outsider has another point of view, another way of thinking and doing, and the newness stimulates the children.

Boys more than ten years old have to hunt in packs. They gather in bunches at recess, at playtime, and they all talk at once, move together in the same direction, do the same thing about the same time and argue endlessly about it. That is a pattern of boy life, and it is a healthy one to follow. The hut and the gang and the club are as essential to these youngsters as milk with their cereal in the morning. Prepare the way for them.

Just as soon as it is possible let the lad join the Boy Scouts and encourage him to take the whole course. He will get fun out of it and much education not found in books. He does what his associates do, and if that is good to do he is in the midst of goodness multiplied by the numbers in the squad. He draws strength from his brothers who are all going his way.

At this stage of a boy's life a hike along a country road with a campfire lunch at the end of it, a scouting trip through the woods, or along a stream, a fish hooked and laid in the basket in anticipation of supper before the campfire spells deep delight. When the last bite is eaten that night, the cleanup finished and the group piles on more sticks and the smoke and sparks rise high, then the backs and legs stretch and the minds relax. It is story time. After that, bed; sleep wrapped in a blanket and cradled in balsam boughs. There may be a better way of spending a long, fine day. If there is, no boy I know has ever found it.

Encourage the boys to join the Scouts. Then help the Scout master do a good job. Praise every mark of his good influence and never, if you truly value that work, deride that influence. Don't say, "And you're a Boy Scout. Fine Scout you are. I thought Boy Scouts knew something." That is the best possible way to kill all interest in the idea. Try the other way.

"Glad you're going out tomorrow. Always does you good. You're getting a good tan, too. Looking like a regular Scout. You might need an extra quarter tomorrow, eh? You've got enough? Good Scouting. Still, you never can tell. You might need it. 'Twon't take up much room. Hope you have a good day."

Help a good idea along. Root for your own Scout and never miss a chance to cheer for the crowd. The boys need both the Scouts and the cheers.

News Behind The News

By Paul Mallon

SOCIAL NOTE

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The average congressman around here has learned of President Roosevelt largely by reading the newspapers. The busiest of all White House occupants has found little time and few occasions to meet personally with the great bulk of his legislators.

For this reason, there was excitement in the house smoking room the other day when Mr. Roosevelt's legislative liaison man, Charles West, delivered a few verbal invitations for a night visit to the White House. Not much more enthusiasm would have been aroused by a personal invitation to the Windsor-Warfield nuptials.

When the guests trooped into the executive mansion, however, they looked at each other and discovered that they were the joint committee considering Mr. Roosevelt's government reorganization plan.

OVERSIGHT

This took the edge off the festivities slightly, but they had a very nice long personal chat with the chief executive, discussing such problems as the proposed six new executive secretaries, the proposed creation of two new government departments, etc.

The callers must have been further discouraged when they left and discovered no newsmen or photographers around. Their call went wholly unreported in the press thereafter, and some of them seemed to consider it a political, if not a social, slight.

At any rate, they again considered the reorganization program a few days following and found they were nowhere nearer an agreement than before their sightseeing trip downtown.

NORALITY

Subsequent negotiations were effective in pushing the committee along toward further work on its four bills. Perhaps, in the end, the White House talk was partly responsible.

Legislative authorities believe there should be and probably will be more of these West-conducted tours to the executive mansion. Such talks represent cooperation which is essential between the legislative and executive branches. They are needed far more at this time than in the recent past because both branches now appear to be resuming their normal period after the hectic depression period in which congress was little more than a typewriter writing executive laws.

Not much news is contained in the government's balanced business figures this month. There have probably been few times in history when industrial production has fluctuated so narrowly in accord with seasonal expectations as since the first of the year. An average level of 117 per cent of the 1923-'25 difficulty in mastering the pities of Gascony and so on.

An unusual degree of unity in thought, ideals and language keeps this nation in a fortunate position of common interests. So the growth of transportation in America has had the particular effect of making real neighbors of us all.

"normal" has been closely maintained.

Current strikes may cut into steel. Prospects are that textiles will go lower. Coal is regaining. Ford production is being threatened. The immediate outlook, therefore, is not encouraging, but would be, if the strike situation cleared.

PURCHASING POWER

A strong economic factor lately has been farm income. The agriculture department has been giving out figures, generally unnoticed, indicating that farm income for April was up to an index of 89, as compared with 81.5 in March and about 70 a year ago. In the first four months of the year, farm purchasing power was 16 per cent higher than a year ago.

It is due entirely to better prices, as the volume of marketing during the first four months was 5 per cent less than last year.

MASTER

The greatest speech which the famous Idaho orator, Senator Borah, ever made was one which was not recorded and will never be. It was delivered extemporaneously in a recent executive session of those members of the senate judiciary committee opposed to court packing.

Mr. Borah was asked by another member to name someone to write the anti-packing report. He replied that it should be a Democrat and then launched into a free expression of his opinion that these Democrats had displayed great courage on a great issue. Years hence, he said, senators would be reading their words, just as they are now reading Webster and Calhoun. No greater example of devotion to principle in the face of political obstacles could be found in history.

At the end, two hard-boiled old senators were actually weeping and the rest were coughing into their handkerchiefs to keep from it.

Editor Register: In the reasoning and argumentation of Mr. Weeks the one thing that is clear is his prejudice against religion and his hostility to God. His arguments are unfounded, illogical opinions. "Because God cannot be perceived with our finite senses, therefore he is not." We are not able to see and approach God in a physical sense, but we can and do see the effects of God in the lives of those that embrace him by faith. Pitcairn Island was a veritable hell of vice and wickedness until, through the Bible, that little group of castaways were led to respect, honor and obey God. The Christian religion has been, and still is, the most powerful influence for good the world has ever known. Religion, and not science, has civilized the cannibals of the South Sea Islands and the savages of Africa. If Mr. Weeks wants to close his eyes to these recognized facts of history, he may do so; if he wants to disregard the experience of mankind through almost 20 centuries, he may do so, but it is not very complimentary to his intelligence.

"It is honesty we need," he says. I fully agree with him. Is it honest to teach children that they have evolved through millions of years (the evolutionists themselves vary in their figures by millions of years, so it is rather hard to look upon their figures as "valid and authentic knowledge") by their own powers from the lowest life forms through various stages of animal forms to their present being? Is it honest to teach that as a scientific fact when the "intermediate forms" have never been discovered? When Darwin himself declared that the proof of his theory was most likely at the bottom of the ocean? When the foremost scientists of the world are discarding the evolutionary theory as untenable and unwelcome? Is it honest to teach that communism is the hope of the world, when it means the enslavement of the individual to the will of a select few, as is the case in Russia? Yes, Mr. Week's let's be honest, and state facts and not merely our own opinions, colored and distorted by prejudice.

"Morals relate to daily living and contacts with our fellow-men." Very true. But who is to teach these morals? Since the facts of history prove that the Christian religion has taught these morals in their purest form, Christianity has very much to do with morality. Produce facts to disprove that statement, not merely your own assertion.

You refer to Whitlow in Tennessee and the sect in Canada, as proof that all religion is immoral. The Bible never told man to stop eating nor to go about naked. God himself made garments for Adam and Eve to cover their nakedness. Christ multiplied the loaves and fishes so that the multitude might eat and not starve. Your reasoning is utterly at fault: Because a few misguided people make religion a cloak of their folly or wickedness—it has often been done—therefore all religion is pernicious. Mr. Weeks, do you not know that the first rule of logic is this: You cannot reason from the particular to the general. Let me illustrate: Because one man in Laguna Beach is immoral, therefore all men in Laguna Beach are immoral. Because one American is an imbecile, therefore all Americans are imbeciles. The study of logic as well as the study of history would be eminently beneficial to some people.

"Men are not made out of the dust of the earth." Woman did not originate from the "rib of Adam." Both men and women, like all mammals are born. Where is your proof for this, Mr. Weeks? That may be your opinion, but that does not yet make it a fact. And will you please answer this question: Since both men and women, like all mammals are born, who gave birth to the first man and woman? If you can answer that question, then you deserve the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Doctor of Science.

"God's commands never lead to 'naked saints' parading the streets and to the Saint of Stopping Oaks." Man's perversion of God's commands leads to such excesses. In such cases the State certainly has a duty—to take steps against them and to suppress them. Mr. Weeks your logic is again at fault: Because a few pervert and corrupt the Christian religion, you condemn the whole Christian Religion; because a few misuse the Bible for evil purposes, you reject the whole Bible.

I rest my case. An unprejudiced, intelligent consideration of facts will readily show that "Religion is morality." That is particularly true of the Christian Religion. "Sapientia sat."

Better Jobs FOR ALL

By R. C. HOILES

Wages Under C. I. O.

It is hard to understand how any capable, fast worker who is not a pure Communist, would want to belong to the C. I. O. It is evident that unions that include great numbers of unskilled workers, the skilled workers would be out-voted by the unskilled. The result would be that the wages would be established for the unskilled at about the same level as they would be established for the skilled. Here is where society suffers because here is where the C. I. O. reduces production.

When the unskilled worker is paid about the same as the skilled worker, then the incentive for the unskilled worker to study, sacrifice and concentrate on learning to do difficult and hard tasks would be greatly reduced. This, of course, would reduce production and lower the standard of living of all the people. Any device, no matter how humanitarian it might appear to be for the moment, that retards the improvement of skill and ability in the long run can only reduce the real wages of all workers.

The difficulty is to get the voting majority to see the necessity of rewards in proportion to services rendered on a strictly impartial, competitive basis.

Wage and Hour Legislation

The public, obsessed with the idea that there is a scarcity of work, is about to enact a law limiting the hours that people dare work at a given enterprise for others.

Our public educators are constantly teaching that purchasing power comes from wages instead of production. They do not realize that the worker, on an honest, competitive system, produces his own wages; that he can only have increased purchasing power by producing more; that, by law, arbitrarily limit the number of hours a man dare serve humanity working for another is simply to limit the amount of purchasing power this individual can have for himself and family.

This wage legislation certainly is an indictment of the intelligence of the voting majority—the absurdity of believing that we can have more by producing less, the absurdity of believing that we can by eliminating competition create new ideas and add to our general welfare. Such laws and beliefs make pure democracy short-lived.

Of course, this has been rapidly spread by our public schools being controlled by the voting majority teaching this kind of doctrine. When we come to the point that all these
